

Happy 2009!!

The classrooms involved with Project intersect were very busy in December. Ms. Dawns Class made dream catcher to give as gifts, the students really enjoyed this activity.

On December 5th the third and fifth Graders had the opportunity to have Ms. Susan Hudek from the Tweed Museum come and present on Frank Big Bear. Frank Big Bear was born and raised on the White Earth Reservation. He studied briefly with the legendary Ojibwe painter George Morrison at the University of Minnesota, but Big Bear is essentially a self-taught artist, relying on his dreams, intuitions, and on influences from his own study of art history and literature. Frank Big Bear's art has achieved cult status among a younger generation of artists, paying homage to tradition Ojibwe culture, with a contemporary search for spiritual meaning. Becca and Arrowanna creating their version of Frank Big Bears style of art work.

Anissa, Winonna and Janessa checking out Frank Big Bears art work.

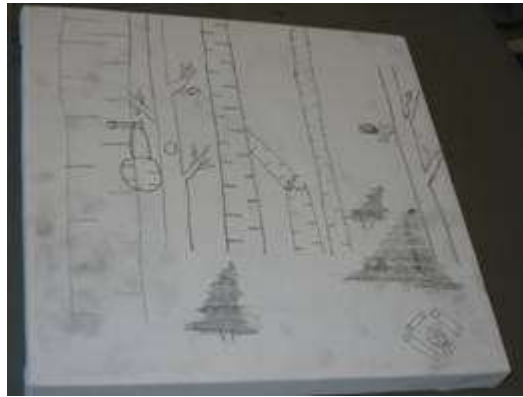

Here is a student's finished piece!! Awesome job, so much detail and it really personalizes it!

Several of Mr. Anderson's students are folding their unique outline for their art work. This really created a nice template for individual creativity.

Ms. Dawn's Class has just begun their season canvas paintings. These students really have great artistic talent. Here are a few of the "beginnings" and can't wait to see the final product of their seasonal quilt.

Bruce and Camilio showing off their canvas along with another student's sugar bush scene.

Ms. Jen's Class will be making their own ice fishing lines and rabbit snares and going out to a local lake to set the snares and try to catch the big one. This will be an interesting trip. Can't wait.. Will definitely take a lot of pictures and report back on their experience. This is tentatively set for January 15th.
